MONDAY NIGHT

"Going to get my meds" dance!

What a day! Today, the campers arrived right on time just before lunch. It was so great to see many returning campers but it was even more exciting to see the looks on the faces of the new campers as they got off the bus.

We had lunch, a little rest time and then camp got started. We had activity centers and swimming in the afternoon followed by Chapel right before dinner. Bible Teacher Brandon did a great job reminding us the truth that God loves all of us.

After dinner, we split the girls to go back to swimming and the boys got to play some games in the gym and some water games at the big field. And we ended the night with a watermelon treat.

Tomorrow is one of the longest feeling days at camp. It's a full day so be praying for these kids (and the counselors) get a good night's sleep so they can be ready to take on Tuesday.

Here's a great story from our scribe... It's one of many reasons why we do camp! Thank you for your continued prayers.

Shortly after getting off the bus I was visiting with the girls in the dorm and asking if anyone needed help. One girl was very worried about her meds. I explained that the nurse and her counselor would make sure she got them and what times they are given. She went on to tell us that she has a lot of meds and that we are going to get so annoyed with her having to get her meds. She told us that a few more times and seemed to be getting worried. I told her that this camp is so great because no one is going to get annoyed with her because she needs to get meds. She got the BIGGEST smile on her face! Such a little accommodation on her counselors part made the world of difference to this child. That is one less thing for her to worry about! We even made a "going to get my meds" dance!

Blessings everyone!

p.s. Please pray for a couple of our volunteers who haven't been feeling well tonight. Praying it's something quick and nothing that causes any escalation.
